1. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless -

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

2. Claims 1-8 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Greuter et al.

Greuter discloses the claimed invention at Figs. 8 or 9-10 where resistors 41, 4 are thermistors embedded in the substrates 51, 5 with metallization 1. The body 5 may be ceramic, as noted at col. 5, lines 39-49 and col. 7, lines 45-50, meeting claim 2. In claim 3, the bodies 4 at Fig. 8 are in parallel. In claim 4, the circumferential area of 4 or 41 is larger than the area at its ends, by definition, since it is a cylinder. For claim 8, Fig. 8 meets the claim where 41 is longer across the figure than it is thick.

3. Claims 1-8 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Abe et al. Abe discloses the claimed invention at Fig. 2 where resistors 2a-3a are parallel connected thermistors embedded in the substrate 5 with metallization 8 on major surfaces thereof, meeting claim 6. For claims 3-5 and 8, the major surfaces are the top and bottoms of the device as seen at Fig. 2. For claim 7, the ends where terminals 8 are primarily located are the major surfaces. In claim 2, the glass substrate is lead boro-silicate, where silicate is deemed to meet the element of "comprises a ceramic substrate" since the substrate comprises in part, silicate, a ceramic.

4. Applicant's arguments filed 7/01/03 have been fully considered but are not persuasive. Applicant argues that the invention uses thermistors for temperature compensation of a circuit. This is intended use, not a positive limitation of the claim. Further, Grueter and Abe do disclose temperature compensation, because circuit protection is a form of temperature compensation. That is, when current increases, the devices compensate by limiting current in the circuit. Applicant admits Grueter discloses circuit protection. See Abe at col. 1 for a similar disclosure - thermistors used in circuits which have a lowered power loss.

5. THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. See MPEP § 706.07(a). Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the date of this final action.
